EDITORIAL

New Education Policy 2020: The way of the future

Writing in 1961, in his celebrated preface to Frantz Fanon's 'The Wretched of the Earth', Jean Paul Sartre described the colonial process and I quote 'Not so very long ago, the European elite undertook to manufacture a native élite. They picked out promising adolescents; they branded them, as with a red-hot iron, with the principles of western culture, they stuffed their mouths full with high-sounding phrases, grand glutinous words that stuck to the teeth. After a short stay in the mother country they were sent home, whitewashed'. This was as true of British colonial legacy in India; and in more ways than one, remains the dark cloud that hangs over an otherwise bright future of the young nation that we are. For a country like India, with over half the population under the age of 25 years, education - the manner in which knowledge is produced, shared, and responds to social and economic inequality - is central to a self-assured future and for expanding its intellectual and economic horizons. As inheritors of the British colonial legacy, for far too long, we have been Macaulay's children. The National Education Policy (NEP) 2020 provides both the vision and the broad institutional framework to decolonise education in India. The NEP must be commended for charting a pathway to foster the spirit of intellectual freedom in India's youth; and advancing a paradigm that will finally enable Indian education to find itself and India's children to speak in their own voice. The NEP is not merely an interpreter of the maladies that afflict India's education. First, it serves to constitute, step by step, the dialectic that education is, at its heart, all about knowledge construction, especially in young minds; and second, the conviction that this needs to be both understood and corrected if the people of our country, together with those in government, care enough to do what is necessary. Four features of the NEP stand out because they address the deep-rooted problems that afflict school education. First, the universalization of Early Childhood Care Education (ECCE) and the extension of the Right to Education (RTE) Act to cover all children from ages 3-18, thus aligning with Sustainable Development Goal 4 - 'Ensure inclusive and equitable quality education and promote life-long learning for all.' There can be little doubt that ECCE constitutes the weakest link in India's school education and works to the great disadvantage of children in rural India. Poor ECCE adversely impacts learning outcomes over the long-term. Integrating the anganwadis into the elementary school system is an important innovation that NEP brings to ensure the seamless transition of children to formal schooling. Second, the focus on developing foundational literacy and numeracy by Class 5, since this constitutes a key problem area for students from disadvantaged backgrounds. The NEP points out that 'Numerous studies show that in the current educational system, once students fall behind, they tend to maintain flat learning curves for years, perpetually, unable to catch up.' This will be supported by the 5+3+3+4 curriculum and pedagogical structure.

Is It Time for Pay-As-You-Use Motor Insurance?

Ahmedabad: This article is attributed to Sajja Praveen, Motor Insurance Head, Policybazaar.com. Since most companies have adopted work-from-home policy due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, there has been a drastic nationwide reduction in the number of kilometres we drive. From mid-March through June 1st week, the total number of kilometres driven is down by almost 50% countrywide, according to recent media reports. These are some truly strange times as extraordinary changes have become common in pretty much all aspects of our lives. Employees throughout the country are being encouraged to work from home, most of the shopping is happening online, and many other things the way we used to do earlier are changing too. With evolution taking place everywhere, why should insurance be left out? This article is attributed to Sajja Praveen, Motor Insurance Head, Policybazaar.com. On that note, we now finally have usage-based motor insurance policies in India. The new type of car insurance policies, launched by different insurers, allows car owners to insure their vehicles for kilometres they tend to drive instead of the run of the mill full year. For all those looking for a car insurance policy that's priced based on how much you actually drive, pay-as-you-use insurance may be the answer. Over the past few weeks, a handful of insurance companies have started offering pay-as-you-drive insurance. For drivers who aren't constantly on the road, these plans could offer an opportunity to reduce car insurance costs. (19-10)

EdTech Platform Bada Business Eyes over 200 Per Cent Revenue Growth

Ahmadabad 6th August 2020: Even as an economic downturn forces companies across industries to cut costs and curtail growth objectives, Indian EdTech startup Bada Business is eyeing an over 200 per cent increase in revenue this year, with major expansion plans on the anvil including 75 new branch offices in Tier II and Tier III cities, 100 new courses and 500 new hirings. "We have major growth plans for this year. Over the next two quarters we aim to double the number of our branch offices to 150 from the current 75, mostly in Tier II and Tier III cities where a bulk of small and medium scale businesses are based including opening 50 experience centres this year with an objective of taking our educational products closer to more people. We are also working to launch around 100 new courses and hire 500 new recruits this year. We are getting a lot of queries from Nepal and Bangladesh, so expanding international is also on our agenda. With the COVID 19 crisis impacting business across the country, we have shifted our focus towards devising programs and video lessons to help MSMEs revive and reinvent their businesses. (19-10)

Max Bupa introduces ReAssure Health Insurance Plan

Ahmedabad, Max Bupa - one of India's leading standalone health insurers, has introduced 'ReAssure'- a comprehensive health insurance plan that provides unlimited sum insured for any type of hospitalization including the ones related to COVID-19. This is a unique customer benefit which allows consumers to make as many claims as required for themselves or for family members covered in the same policy, for same or different illness in a year, at no additional cost. A single claim under ReAssure benefit will be payable upto the base sum insured amount. In a nutshell, ReAssure customers will never fall short of coverage which is critical to protect against unforeseen medical expenditure towards all kinds of diseases, including Covid-19. Even in case of critical illnesses like kidney dialysis or cancer, when patients often need hospitalization multiple times in the same year, unlimited coverage in the product will prove to be extremely useful. For instance, a family of four (husband, wife and two kids) are insured with Max Bupa ReAssure policy with INR 10 lakh floater sum insured. In case one of them gets diagnosed with COVID 19 or any other disease covered in the policy and needs hospitalization, then he or she can claim coverage upto INR 10 lakh along with the ReAssure benefit getting triggered. Risks to financial stability

This past week saw the near-simultaneous publication of two books by senior former central bankers. Former RBI Governor Urjit Patel published his book called 'Overdraft' which is dedicated to the Indian saver. It was much awaited from someone who was otherwise extremely reticent even while in office. Within a week of its publication it became one of the top-ranking non-fiction books. There was much buzz about its content, since Patel had chosen to be silent and almost invisible to the public eye since he left the Reserve Bank of India abruptly in December 2018. The other book is by former RBI Deputy Governor Viral Acharya, who left six months later, without completing his full tenure. His book is titled 'Quest for Restoring Financial Stability in India', and is actually a collection of his writings and speeches, with a newly written long preface.

Together, Patel and Acharya were known as hawkish, but determined to clean up the banking system. In many ways, they were continuing a clean-up tradition established by former Governor Raghuram Rajan. Patel had served as Rajan's deputy. In some ways, this trio had an image of being too academic, strongly intellectual, and outsiders to the system, who were 'inflexible' and not pragmatic. Whether these adjectives were unfair is a debate for another day. Acharya was in the eye of a storm due to a strongly-worded speech he gave just a couple of months before Patel's abrupt departure.
